

5 TIPS TO SAVE ON WATER AND WASTEWATER SOLUTIONS

1. SELECT A MODULAR AND FLEXIBLE SOLUTION

When you go with a standard solution, you may end up with too much of a product. By choosing a service provider that offers modular and scalable units, you only pay for what you need. Units can be added or subtracted as the population at your project site goes up or down, which guarantees you only pay for what you need.

2. GO WITH REMOTE MONITORING

Remote monitoring means that your treatment facility is observed 24/7 from a central monitoring hub simultaneously with other locations. This significantly reduces staffing costs, creating savings for you. Remote monitoring also allows you to see what is happening at your plant without the hassle and cost of travelling to the site.

3. RE-EVALUATE YOUR WATER HAULING NEEDS

We often see people automatically choosing to haul potable water to their project site, assuming that a water treatment plant is a costly option. Scalable treatment plants can be surprisingly cost effective compared to the cost of hauling water, so do get a quote for a plant of your own to make an informed decision.

4. FIND AN EXPERT TO TAKE CARE OF PERMITS

Obtaining necessary permits and approvals can be confusing, time consuming and difficult. With multiple approval levels including municipal, provincial and federal, the process can take several years depending on project size and scope. Relieve yourself of the paperwork and let an expert take care of it.

A full-service water management provider can either take care of this process or provide guidance to you on governmental, community and stakeholder consultations, including landowners, private groups and First Nations.

5. SAVE TIME WITH QUICK INSTALLATION

Prefabricated components can be installed quickly and your facility will be running in no time. In fact, we have some units available for immediate deployment.
